

Florian Marcus

Having lived, studied and worked in three different countries, Florian has learned to appreciate Estonia's vision of a digitally accessible government that serves its citizens rather than the other way around. With his work experience spanning both the private sector and government, he has witnessed the shortcomings, aspirations and struggles of each side. Combined with his academic mindset, Florian uses his experience on a daily basis to ensure that every visiting delegation will have access to and comprehensively understand the information it requires to succeed. Florian also likes to dig into the metrics and data underlying various rankings and other valuable comparisons, which can help Estonia advance its e-Governance model even further.

Education:

Baltic Sea Region Studies, MA.
University of Tartu, Estonia.

Politics and Security, MA.
University College London,
United Kingdom.

Politics and International Relations,
BA. University of Reading, United Kingdom.

Specialities

e-Governance, i-Voting, cyber security, international security, public policy, EU rules and regulations, public speaking, languages, teaching, translation.

Languages

English and German